

To allow just a few people/organizations to control most aspects of the media is grossly undemocratic and destructive to free enterprise. We already live in an environment that precludes "freedom of the Press." I live in Cincinnati Ohio. We have only one morning paper here, and morning is the time of day that I prefer to read the news. The publishers/owners are essentially regulating what I read. I would hardly call that freedom of the press, although, I suppose, the people putting out the Enquirer feel they are enjoying their freedom.

Instead of reducing the number of folks who can own TV stations, Radio stations, Newspapers, Magazines, etc limit the number of mediums, (and even within a medium) a person can legally hold.

What exists today and that which is being proposed, has to have Teddy Roosevelt, turning in his grave.

Dan Kanoza